DESCRIPTION

With an array of effective FDA-approved medications now available for addressing substance use disorders and the emerging prescription and opioid use epidemic, it is vital that specialty substance use disorder (SUD) treatment, mental health and healthcare providers learn more about Medication-Assisted Treatment (MAT). Equally important, policymakers, drug court/family court personnel, and social service professionals will learn how supporting the use of medication, combined with evidence-based behavioral therapies, can save lives and reduce healthcare costs.

FEATURED SPEAKERS

Edwin A. Salsitz, MD, DFASAM, Specialist in Addiction Medicine and Pulmonary Disease, Mount Sinai Beth Israel Hospital, New York City, NY

Ned Presnall, LCSW, Exec. Director, Clayton Behavioral, St. Louis, MO
